To
Prof. P.Ramachandran,
The Principal
Jayaram College of Engineering & Technology
Thuraiyur Tk, Tiruchirappalli—621 014.

Dear Sir:

I am happy to learn about the NCACT 2006 Conference on “Advanced Computing and Technology” that is being organized on the 20th to 22nd of this month by your college. I thank the organizers for inviting me to present on the keynote during the conference as well.

These conferences provide a needed exposure for the future engineers with the industry by preparing them for what to expect after they graduate. Similarly from an industry side, I am always excited whenever I get an opportunity to interact with students. I look at them not only as the future IT generation, but also as a great source of getting fresh air in to work places with their boundless imagination, creativity and dreams. For the great Indian IT Saga to continue in its strides, it has to elevate from outsourcing to a position of innovation and thought leadership. I firmly believe these are possible only by motivating students and by encouraging their research ambitions. Conferences like NCACT play a vital role here by exposing the students to the wider world. And the topic selected by the organizers of this event “Advanced Computing and Technology” is very apt to the above goals.

In my personal experience, when I look back into College Conferences that I was involved I realize today that they have helped to shape me in Presentation Skills, Public Speaking, Stage Ethics, Organization ability and above all people skills. A conference of this nature, also builds on the three qualities I normally look for when I hire graduates from campus: Thirst for experimenting with technology, Open Mind to Learn and spoken language skills.

I wish good luck to the students, faculty and the college management to make this conference a fruitful endeavor for everyone involved.

Regards,
T.N.C.VENKATA RANGAN
